The Battle-Field of Gettysburg.

A GRAPHIC AND ACCURATE PICTURE.

To the editor of The Press:

SIR:—I have just returned from a visit to Gettysburg, and if you choose to accompany me in a long ramble over the field and hear what a participant in the battle has to say, well and good. In the main, "I tell the story as 'twas told to me;" but it is hard to say anything new upon a theme already hacknied. You newspaper people have, I know, what most people have a horror of—long articles; therefore, "for fear your readers should grow skittish," you have my full permission to abbreviate, expunge or omit, at your pleasure. Assuming this article, then, to have escaped the fate of your waste paper basket, start with me on this fine November morning, out the Emmettsburg road. For our companion and guide we have Captain A. F. Cavada, a gallant and accomplished young officer, who served all through, from Yorktown to Petersburg, and for nearly two years on the staff of Major General Humphreys.

About a mile out we halt. The Captain loquitur. "Now I begin to feel at home. Let me take an observation, as these fences were not here then. All right. I've got it now. Do you see that big walnut on the ridge over there? That was General Humphrey's headquarters on the morning of Thursday, July 2d. Almost worn out with hard marching, I was aroused from my weary bivouac at daylight, and ordered to post Colonel Tilgham's regiment—the 26th Pennsylvania—on picket along here. Later in the day, the right of our division, Carr's brigade, held this brick house. Further down was posted Turnbull's battery. There, below that barn, stood Lieut. Seeley's, and still further towards our left the batteries of Birney's division, under Livingston, Smith, Randolph, Clark and Winslow. I mention them all, for never were guns handled more beautifully. All suffered fearfully—Seely's especially. He had hardly a man or horse left standing, and was himself severely wounded. He was a gallant officer, and had risen from the ranks. Now go with me into that orchard. I want to find a certain apple tree which served as a rendezvous during the day for us staff officers and our orderlies. At one period, standing under it, with Captains Humphreys and McClellan, a shell exploded in the tree, killing three of our poor orderlies besides striking my horse." We found the tree—its limbs were shattered, and the top entirely gone.

"About two o'clock the whole Third Corps moved out in line of battle over the open ground, and a more magnificent spectacle of 'living valor rolling on the foe,' I never witnessed. Away over on that bare spot of rising ground the rebels had planted two batteries with which they enfiladed our whole line, fairly sweeping it from right to left. Lord! how they pitched it into us! Longstreet's infantry debouched from those woods, and in a short time all around where we are standing—to the right, to the left and in front—along this road, through that peach orchard, away down toward Round Top, for hours the battle raged. Gen. Sickles was wounded near the large barn. How well I remember this spot of ground. It was here, behind that stone fence, that I had been ordered to post Colonel Burling's brigade. On my way back, I passed the 114th Pa. Regiment, then commanded by my brother, Lieut. Colonel F. F. Cavada. It had just been ordered to an advanced position, beyond the road. I rode up and shook hands with my brother. 'Good bye, Fred, look out for yourself; you are going into a hot place, and are sure to catch it.' So it turned out, the 114th, in connection with the 68th Pa. Col. Tippin, had a bloody fight of it, and lost heavily. My brother and his brigade commander, General Graham, were both taken prisoners, the latter severely wounded. I never saw the rebels fight with such diabolical fury. The most murderous fire—canister, shrapnel, and musketry—was poured into their very faces, as it were, but nothing stopped them. The 3d Corps, those heroes of Chancellorsville, and other bloody fields, led by Birney, Humphreys, De Trobriand, Ward, Carr and Graham—never fought more heroically.

A word of criticism here. At one period of the battle, Birney, being hard pressed, called upon Gen. Sykes, in command of the 5th corps, for assistance. Sykes had been ordered to support the 3d if called upon, but he returned for answer that he "would be up in time—that his men were tired and were making coffee!" They did come up in about an hour, and, says Genl. Warren, in his testimony, "the troops under General Sykes arrived barely in time to save Round Top, and they had a very desperate fight to hold it." And again of the operations next day. "When the repulse took place, Gen. Meade intended to move forward and assault the enemy in turn. He ordered an advance of the Fifth Corps, but it was carried on so slowly that it did not amount to much, if anything." Gen. George Sykes is a brave man, but entirely "too slow," so at least General Grant seemed to think, for in the subsequent reorganization of the Army of the Potomac, the services of "Tardy George," No. 2, were dispensed with. The 5th, as a corps, has a glorious record, and never failed to fight well when properly handled.

To resume the captain's narrative. "As the afternoon wore on the pressure became greater and greater, until at last our whole corps, with the exception of Carr's brigade and a few other regiments, was hurled down the slope, broken and discomfited, the rebels following in hot pursuit. Our losses were frightful. In our division, of 5,000 men, our loss was nearly 2,000." "Well, Captain, you saw most of the heavy fighting done by this army, tell me, were you ever in a hotter place than this?" "Never but once—and that reminds me of a little story. In the attack upon the enemy's position at the first Fredericksburg fight, our division was ordered to storm the heights. As we were preparing to move, General Humphreys—always a very polite man—turned round to his staff, and in his blandest manner remarked, "Young gentlemen, I intend to lead this assault, and shall be happy to have the pleasure of your company.' Of course, the invitation was too polite to be declined. That was the roughest place I ever was in, and I can't conceive, even to this day, how any of us got back alive." Our division lost nearly 1,100 men in about fifteen minutes. In this clump of bushes my horse received a second wound, and fell dead under me. I managed to scramble over the ridge, where our men were being rallied, soon after the sun went down and the rebels were beaten back beyond the road.

"Capt. Chester, of our military family, was seen to go down in the melee, and after nightfall a party started out in search of him. We found him near that large flat rock, alive, but grievously wounded. His horse and faithful orderly both lay dead beside him, and across his legs a rebel soldier, who he had killed with his revolver, while in the act of plundering him of his watch. He was taken up tenderly, and conveyed to the hospital on Rock creek, where he died next day.

"With heavy hearts we now set about the task of burying such of our poor fellows as were within reach.—Always the saddest of a soldier's duties, it was peculiarly so upon this occasion, for all felt that the rising sun would bring with it a repetition of this day's horrors, and that, perhaps, at this hour to morrow, some comrade might be performing this same sad office for us.

> "Few and short were the prayers we said,
> And we spoke not a word of sorrow,
> As we steadfastly gazed on the face of the dead,
> And bitterly thought on the morrow.'"

In course of the day we paid a visit to Mr. Sherfey's house, where we were most hospitably received. The house stands about the centre of the field, and is riddled, from garret to basement. Traces of the conflict are to be seen on every side, including the last resting place of many poor Southerners. Mr. Sherfey's barn was burnt during the fight, and some of the wounded who sought refuge there perished in the flames. "These," said Mrs. Sherfey, producing some tin cans, "contain peaches that were growing in our orchard over there at the time of the battle. These are my trophies." In the front garden grows the beautiful shrub known as the "burning bush," luxuriant with its crop of bright red berries, typical of the blood shed at its roots. "Take some of the berries with you and plant them," said the kind old lady; "they will grow anywhere, and will be pleasant mementoes of Gettysburg."

We next made our way to Little Round Top, where we had the pleasure of meeting Colonel Batchelder. This gentleman is engaged in collecting the details of the battle, and will, no doubt, produce a book of equal interest with his great map. I was sorry to hear him say that he intends designating this as "Weed's Hill," in honor of the general who fell on its top. Honor the memory of the brave man in some other way, Colonel, but don't seek to change this name. As "Little Round Top" it has already passed into history, and so it will be known forever. There are few finer views of the whole field than from this point, and here took place the closest and most sanguinary fighting of Thursday. In front and to the right the 5th Corps had a heavy thing of it. On the height fought two of the noblest soldiers of the army, Vincent and Rice. The former laid down his life here, the latter at Spottsylvania the year after. All the little stone walls thrown up between the huge boulders are still here. In fact, nothing is changed. Would that this could be said of other parts of the field. Inscriptions upon the rock mark the spots where Vincent and Hazlett fell. Here, too, at the early age of twenty-five, fell that accomplished soldier, Col. O'Rourke, of the 140th New York. Graduating at the head of his class, two years before, he was at once assigned to duty in the field, and soon became distinguished for his reckless and impetuous courage. He was struck while mounted upon a rock gallantly animating his men. Fortunately, the extreme left was held by that splendid regiment the 20th Maine, then under the command of Col. Chamberlain, afterwards one of Sheridan's heroes of the Five Forks. Firing away their last cartridge, Chamberlain ordered his regiment to charge down the hill, and succeeded in clearing its sides with the bayonet. The remarkable ledge of rocks known as the "Devil's Den," directly opposite Round Top, was occupied by the enemy's sharpshooters, one of whom had a safe position within the cleft and picked off our men with fatal accuracy. The face of the boulder behind which he lay is covered with marks of the minnies sent at him. One even "went for him" clean through the crevice, but missed. He was finally dislodged by a charge, and escaped through an opening to the rear. Seven muskets, it is said, were found in his hiding place. There is room enough for fifty. On the slope in front of this den lie bleaching the bones of rebels dead, washed out by rains. The scene of Crawford's charge, with our superb Pennsylvania Reserves, was to the right and front of Little Round Top. Brigadier General Zook and Colonel Jeffards—the latter of the 4th Michigan—were killed in the field beyond. Colonel Jeffards was killed by a bayonet thrust, while gallantly holding up with his own hands the colors of his regiment. Near that ploughed field, charging at the head of his brave "Bucktails," fell our Chester county neighbor, Col. Fredrick Taylor. No death in the whole army was more sincerely mourned.

> "Many the ways that lead to death, but few
> Grandly; and one alone is glory's gate,
> Standing wherever free men dare their fate,
> Determined, as thou wert, to die—or do!"

We now proceed along the line held by us on Friday, Colonel B. politely acting as guide. In that little groove close to our lines, fell the rebel General Barksdale on Thursday. This violent, brawling rebel started in search of "his rights," and this little pile of stones here marks the spot where he is presumed to have found them. It is said he was drunk when he started on the charge, and this may account for his headlong, reckless bravery.—True or not, the story's still extant. Here, in the thickest of the fight, exposing himself like a common soldier, the gallant Gen. Hancock received his wound. That advanced line of works was held by the Vermont brigade. It was commanded by General Stannard, who subsequently gave an arm to the cause on the James. A pile of knapsacks, just as they were unslung, still lie mouldering here—on one the inscription "16th Vermont" is still visible. Even now the debris of battle—hats, shoes, cartridge boxes, bayonet scabbards, canteens, &c.—lie scattered all over the field. Next we come to the position held by the Philadelphia Brigade, composed of the 69th—Paddy Owens' regulars; the 72d, Baxter's Zouaves, and that splendid fighting regiment, the 71st, or California, commanded originally by the lamented Baker, and subsequently by our gallant fellow townsmen, Colonels John Markoe and R. Penn Smith. This brigade—veteran fighters, every man of them—was led upon this occasion by a gallant New Yorker, Brig. General Webb, and nobly was the honor of both cities sustained. Would that I had it in my power to particularize all the organizations conspicuous for courage and conduct in this great battle, but that would be to mention almost every regiment, battery, and squadron engaged. From here we have an excellent view of Seminary Ridge, the line of woods whence the rebels issued and the beautiful level fields over which they swept in their grand charge. This certainly is the most magnificent battle field in the world. The heights of La Belle Alliance and Mont Saint Jean in some respects resemble our Cemetery and Seminary Ridges, with the same gentle, undulating valley intervening; but at Waterloo the principal road runs at right angles, while here, parallel with the position.

Speaking of the bombardment which preceeded the charge, that experienced soldier, General Hancock, says: "It was the most terrific cannonade I ever witnessed, and the most prolonged." A rebel eye-witness describing it, says: "I have never yet heard such tremendous artillery firing. The very earth shook beneath our feet, and the hills and rocks seemed to reel like a drunken man. For one hour and a half the most terrific firing was continued, during which time the shrieking of shells, the crash of falling timber, the fragments of rock flying through the air, shattered from the cliffs by solid shot; the heavy mutterings from the valley between the opposing armies, the splash of bursting shrapnel, and the fierce neighing of wounded artillery horses, made a picture terribly grand and sublime." After this came the charge. Our eighty guns, planted on the crest from Cemetery Hill to Round Top, "volleyed and thundered," and, when the infantry joined in the chorus, so terrible was the fire that tore through them that the rebel columns presented the extraordinary spectacle of ten thousand men playing at "leap frog!" In spite of every effort, the flower of Lee's veterans, directed by tried leaders such as Garnett, Armstead, Kemper, Wright, Posey and Mahone, failed in carrying our position, although at one or two points they charged up to, and even over it. "What other than Southern troops would have made that charge?" Ay, sir, but what other than Northern would have met and repulsed it? Northern endurance, upon this occasion was too much for Southern impetuosity and dash. "There swung the pine against the palm." In the bloody ruck hundreds of their best officers went down. It was the turning point on that 3d day of July went down the sun of "the Confederacy" forever! Although known as "Pickett's charge," Gen. Graham, whom I met here yesterday, informs me that Pickett himself was not in it. He describes him as a coarse, brutal fellow, and says he treated him with the greatest inhumanity after the battle, whilst wounded, and a prisoner in his hand. The rebel corps commanders either did not expose themselves as freely as our own, or they had better luck, for none were hit, whilst we lost one, Reynolds, killed; and two, Hancock and Sickels, wounded. The story told in Blackwood, by Col. Freemantle, of the British army, who was present, may help to explain it. He says, that carried away by excitement, he rushed up to Longstreet, who was sitting on a fence, "quietly whittling a stick," whilst watching the charge, and said, "Gen. Longstreet, isn't this splendid; I wouldn't have missed it for the world?" "The d—l you wouldnt," replied Longstreet; "why don't you see we are getting licked like h—l!" We now crossed the Baltimore pike, calling on our way at the small frame building, on the Taneytown road, used as the headquarters of Gen. Meade on Friday. This will always be a point of great interest. The house is sadly shattered, and the poor widow who owns it complains bitterly of her losses. "When I comes home, my house was all over blood; the 'sojers' took away all my coverlits and quilts, two tons of hay, they spiled my spring, my apple-trees and every ding." She says a couple of hundred dollars would be a great help to her, and thinks she should get" from someveres." Sure enough, why shouldn't the poor woman get it? In the garden of a cottage in the little village of Waterloo the visitor is shown the monument erected over the Marquis of Anglesea's leg, and the poor peasant has made quite a little fortune by exhibiting the boot cut from the leg, and the table upon which the amputation was performed. This hint might not be thrown away upon a more enterprising person, but I doubt if this poor, old, frowsy German woman will ever profit by it. To the right of Cemetery Hill was stationed the battery so furiously assaulted by Hays' brigade of Louisiana Tigers. The lunettes and traverses remain undisturbed, and grass grown.

The little eminence in front was held, and with distinguished honor, by that conscientious and patriotic soldier, Brigadier General Wadsworth. The works thrown up by our men on Culp's Hill are still to be seen, except such portion of the timber as is being removed by the owner of the ground. Only think of the meanness of the man who is pulling to pieces these monuments, and converting the timber into fence rails and cord wood! The effect of the furious fire poured upon Ewell's swarming columns is visible enough. Hardly a rock or a tree in front of these works has escaped. Many of the trees are covered and scarred with bullets as high as fifty feet from the ground. There was "wild," as well as deadly shooting here on that fearful Thursday night and early Friday morning. Along this rough, rocky hill fought our Geary, and that distinguished Rhode Islander, Brigadier General Green. Five months after, at the desperate midnight battle of Wahatchie, in Lookout Valley, this indomitable fighting officer only added to the laurels already gained at Antietam and Gettysburg. An inscription on a tree close by tells the story of a large mound in the ravine below: "To the right lie buried forty-five rebels!" From here we struck across to the scene of the first day's fight. In the following communication to Gov. Curtin, General Cutler tells us how the battle opened: "I owe a duty to one of your regiments, the 56th, and its brave commander, Col. J. W. Hoffman. It was my fortune to be in the advance on the morning of July 1st. The atmosphere being a little thick, I took out my glass to examine the enemy, being a few paces in front of Col. H., he turned to me and inquired, 'Is that the enemy?' My reply was 'Yes.' Turning to his men, he commanded. 'Ready—right oblique—aim—fire!' and the battle of Gettysburg was opened. The fire was followed by other regiments instantly, still, that battle on the soil of Pennsylvania was opened by her own sons, and it is just that it should become a matter of history." Here is the ground fought over by our brave cavalrymen, under Pleasanton, Buford, Kilpatrick, Farnsworth, Merritt, Custer and Gregg. Never, in any preceding campaign, had the cavalry of this army rendered such distinguished and invaluable service. To meet the enemy was to overthrow them, until, at last, it was only with the greatest difficulty that Stuart [illegible] next point reached was the scene of the bloody though unavailing struggle of the 1st and 11th Corps. The marks of battle still abound, but the interest centres in the spot where Reynolds was killed. The General was nearly up with the skirmish line—no place, say military men, for a corps commander; "but that was just like John Reynolds;" and he had just despatched several of his aids, Capts. Baird, Rosengarten and Riddle, on some special duties, and was himself watching the deployment of a brigade of Wisconsin troops, when the fatal bullet, fired by a sharp shooter, struck him in the neck and he fell off his horse dead. Poor Reynolds!

> "There have been tears and breaking hearts for thee."

We now stand in the National Cemetery, on Cemetery Hill. Who can stand unmoved in this silent city of the dead. Here repose the precious offerings laid upon the altar of the country by the loyal States. Ordinarily the filling up of a cemetery is slow work—the work of years. Three days sufficed to fill this! And what is the reward of those brave men for their weeks of weary marching and days and nights of fearful fighting? "Two pace of the vilest earth!" Here they lie, "those unnamed demi-gods" of the rank and file. "Unknown!" "unknown!" the only epitaph of hundreds. Yes, here they lie, "massed" with beautiful military precision, rank upon rank, as if awaiting the order to appear in review before the Great Commander-in chief of us all!

> "Up many a fortress wall
> They charged—those boys in blue;
> 'Mid surging smoke and volleying ball
> The bravest were the first to fall—
> To fall for me and you!"

Who can ever forget those terrible days of July. That period of agonizing suspense?

And when the news did come, Oh, how that sad catalogue pulled upon the heart strings! Reynolds, Zook, Farnsworth, Card, Weed, Jeffards, Taylor, Arrowsmith, O'Rourke, Lowery, Crosse, Hazlett, Vincent, Devereaux, Williard, Adams, Miller.

> "Period of honor as of woes,
> What bright careers 'twas thine to close!
> Mark'd on thy roll of blood what names,
> To Freedom's memory, and to Fame's!
> Laid there their last immortal claims!"

So ends my story of Gettysburg.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov., 1865.

☞ IN the midst of a stormy discussion, a gentlemen rose to settle a matter in dispute. Waving his hands majestically over the excited disputants, he began, "Gentlemen, all I want is common sense——" "Exactly," Jerrold interrupted, "that is precisely what you do want!" The discussion was lost in a burst of laughter.

Proclamation by the Governor.

The 7th of December appointed a State Thanksgiving Day.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—The following proclamation was issued to day.

With feelings of the most profound gratitude to Almighty God, I invite the good people of the Commonwealth to meet in their places of public worship on Thursday, the seventh day of December next, and raise their hearts and voices in praise and thanksgiving to Him, not only for the manifest ordinary blessings which, during the past year, he has continued to heap upon us, for abundant and gathered harvests, for thriving industry, for general health, for domestic good order and government, but also most expressly and fervently for his unequalled goodness in having so strengthened and guarded our people during the last four years that they have been enabled to crush to the earth the late wicked rebellion—to exterminate the system of human slavery, which caused it. As we wrestled in prayer with Him in the dark time of our trouble, when our brothers and sons were staking life and limb for us on a bloody field, or suffering by torture or famine in the hells of Andersonville or the Libby, so now, when our supplications have been so marvellously and graciously answered, let us not withhold from Him the homage of our thanksgiving. Let us say to all, "Choose, ye, this day, whom ye will serve, but for us and our house, we will serve the Lord." Come, then, ye people whom He hath so helped and led; come ye war worn and mutilated men whom He hath spared to return to your dear homes, let us throng the gates of His temples; let us throw ourselves on the knees of our hearts with a wilful joy at the foot of His throne, and render aloud our praise and thanksgiving to Him, because He hath made the right to prevail; because He hath given us the victory; because He hath cleansed our land from the stain of human slavery, and because He hath graciously shown forth in the eyes of all men the great truth that no gov[illegible]cated, moral and religious people.

By the Governor.

ELI SLIFER,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

A National Thanksgiving.

By the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God during the year which is now coming to an end, to relieve our beloved country from the fearful scourge of civil war, and to permit us to secure the blessings of peace, unity, and harmony with a great enlargement of civil liberty; And whereas our Heavenly Father has also during the year graciously averted from us the calamities of foreign war, pestilence and famine, while our granaries are full of the fruits of an abundant season; And whereas righteousness exalteth a nation, while sin is a reproach to any people;

Now, therefore, be it known, that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby recommend to the people thereof that they do set apart and observe the first Thursday of December next as a day of National Thanks—given to the Creator of the Universe for these deliverances and blessings. And I do further recommend, that on that occasion the whole people make confession of our national sins against His infinite goodness, and with one heart and one mind implore the Divine guidance in the ways of national virtue and holiness.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand and eight hundred and sixty five, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninetieth.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President:
WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

☞ A ten years old Sunday school boy was asked by his teacher, not long since, what the phylacteries of the Pharisees were. "Broad hems, such as ladies wear on their dresses," was the reply. "But the Pharisees didn't wear them for the same reason that the ladies do, did they?" "O, yes," was the wicked answer, "to be seen of men."

☞ A gentleman, praising the personal charms of a very plain woman in the presence of Foote, the latter said, "And why don't you lay claim to such an accomplished beauty?" What right have I to her?" exclaimed the gentleman. "Every right, by the law of nations," replied Foote; "every right, as the first discoverer."

☞ "Where do you hail from?" queried a Yankee of a traveller. "Where do you rain from?" "Don't rain at all," said the astonished Jonathan.—"Neither do I hail, so mind your own business."

An Appeal for our Market.

Some great measures, like some great men, have had very obscure beginnings; this, we think, will prove true in the measure of locating a market in the somewhat backward town of Huntingdon. We saw the experiment made on Friday last, and shall see it tried again to-day, but too late for commenting upon. But what we saw on Friday last convinces us that the possibility of having a market here is not a delusion, but a fact. To be sure there was not enough encouragement given to cause us to rejoice, but yet there was enough countenance given to the enterprise to give us inward satisfaction and encouragement that there would yet be a market fully established and well-regulated in our midst. There were but a few wagons in, but we believe their owners knew just as much and heard as much more as those who staid away with their wagons. And can those who were in say they were not benefited? Can they go back to their countrymen, and tell them all the evil they might have heard against the market was true? If they do, we know it will be told through selfish motives, for they will be the very ones who will return again.

We have said heretofore that we could see nothing in the new market law that would accrue to the disadvantage of the farmer. Wherein the farmers are "muffed," we cannot discern. Do they find anything in the market law too strict? If there is let them make their complaint. Are they put to any inconvenience? If so, let them show where it lies. Do they think they cannot dispose of their merchandise as readily? If so, let them dispel such a fear, for they can sell just as much and more than they did when they had to travel over town, and "hawked from door to door." Are they afraid our citizens will not give them as high a price for their articles as the merchants? If so, they ought to see that they are mistaken. Citizens will compete with each other in purchasing, and the highest price will rule. Our people will not hesitate to pay a higher price for a good article than they were obliged to pay for a poor one. We trust we have answered all questions that may be raised by our farmers; at least clearly where they can be benefitted.

We want to see the market established. To be sure, a simple market is not the best thing that can be established. What would be best, would be a regular market house, but in lieu of that let us have a market until a market house can be erected. The vast agricultural facilities of our county should be improved, and our husbandmen should be stimulated to make available every acre they own. And as this is one of the means of accomplishing such a result, let it be encouraged. There are many luxuries sold in the cities and raised in the country surrounding the cities that could be sold here, but which we have had to forego, just because our farmers and farmer's wives were not encouraged to produce and make them. We have been obliged, in the main, to depend upon the cities, through the market cars, for whatever luxuries and a great many vegetables that we consume, and in this particular we are situated and are just as dependent as some towns surrounded with barren and rocky land. We want to see a change, knowing that it would be for the good of our citizens and farmers alike. Our farms are just as arable and productive, and our farmers are just as laborious and enterprising, as those of any other region; our people are just as fond of good living as our more opulent neighbors in the city, and it would be truly a marked and profitable era that would be ushered in, should every encouragement be given to any wise step taken to establish market regulations in our midst.

It is only necessary for the farmers to understand the requirements of the market law to be satisfied with it. They are at liberty to offer for sale any article any day in the week, but the sales must be made in the Diamond until noon of each day, after that the articles can be offered for sale in any part of the town. Tuesday and Friday are days named only as regular market days.

A Monument to Jeff.—The latest proposition extant is one to rear a monument to the memory of Jefferson Davis—the "hero" of the rebellion. We think this unnecessary as well as insulting—as the mounds on Southern battle-fields, the wreck and ruin entailed within the past four years, the numbers of widows and orphans north and south—is a monument sufficient to forever hold in contempt the assuming monarch who marshalled his hosts to subvert a nation's peace and honor.

☞ President Johnson, by a proclamation, has restored the writ of habeas corpus in the southern States.

The Writ of Habeas Corpus.

The proclamation recently issued by the President in regard to the writ of habeas corpus possesses a double importance. It restores the privilege of that time-honored conservator of individual liberty to all the unquestionably loyal districts of our country, and thus re-establishes the complete jurisdiction of civil courts in Maryland, Missouri, and all the Northern States; yet it significantly announces that the privilege of the writ is to remain suspended in Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florda, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, the District of Columbia, and the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona. The President has thus clearly intimated his conviction of the necessity of continued watchfulness over the districts lately in rebellion, and of the necessity of maintaining in hands of the representatives of the Federal Government a power to act promptly and energetically, that will prove an efficent check upon all evil-disposed persons. The country will cordially sustain and approve this action of the Administration, and its hopes will be strengthened and the restraining influences which are evidently still needed in many portions of the South to secure protection to the freedmen and the development of a feeling of genuine loyalty, will not be prematurely withdrawn.—The tone of the recent despatch of the President to Governor Holden, of North Carolina, is another gratifying indication that reconstruction is not to be completed before satisfactory evidences of repentance and reformation are given to the nation.—The Press.

☞ J. W. Forney, who has issued a few numbers of his Sunday Press, has met with the expressed opposition of some of the clergy of Philadelphia. In the conclusion of the defence of his course he says:

"But I think I may venture to say that the Sunday Press, reaching as it does all classes, teaching as it does nothing but good principles, expressed in decent language, and intended to promote patriotic ends, will produce at least as many beneficial consequences to society at large as any one of its more pretentious "religious" contemporaries. My only object in publishing my news-paper every day in the week, was to meet what I supposed to be a general demand. In other words, to supply to those who looked with favor upon The Press, and who reposed a strong confidence in the sincerity of my councils in the midst of our country's troubles, such Sunday reading as I believed would be most agreeable to them. I repeat, that I can conceive of no harm that will possibly result to either religion, or to society at large, by maintaining the position I have taken."

the Sunday Press, and can see nothing in the contents that detracts from the honor and sanctity of the Sabbath. A good Sabbath-day journal has been a demand, and we are pleased to see that the proper individual—Mr. Forney—has taken upon himself the responsibility of meeting such demand.

☞ President Johnson has sent a telegram to Governor Holden, of North Carolina, in which he thanks him for the faithful manner in which he has discharged his duties, and assures him that he will be sustained by the Government. He further states that the result of the recent election in North Carolina has done much damage to the State in regard to the restoration of its relations with the Government; and further, that if the action and spirit of the Legislature were in the same direction it would be still more damaging, and might prove fatal. He says that it is hoped the Legislature will endeavor rather to heal what has already been done than to increase the mischief.

The War not Ended.—Besides the fact of the restoration of the habeas corpus in the rebel States, we have other evidence, that the war is not ended. Rebel chiefs are seeking power and position in southern society, by their voice and example they are encouraging opposition to the President's policy, and the Southern legislators with reluctance yield to the positive requirement that they must repudiate their debt incurred in the rebellion. But, withal, we have a more practical and warlike evidence in that of hosts of robbers and murderers that infest the South. The reign of the guerillas has commenced, and upon them the weight of military power will have to be exercised. We are sometimes led to inquire, when the news of some State murder and robbery reaches us, Are not the guerillas amongst us of the North? End their career, and the thought of war will vanish.

Pennsylvania—Official.—The following is the official result for Auditor and Surveyor General, at the late election:

For Auditor General.
J. F. Hartranft, Union,	238,400
W. W. H. Davis, Dem.,	215,740
Hartranft's majority,	22,660
For Surveyor General.
J. M. Campbell, Union,	237,967
J. P. Linton, Dem.,	215,981
Campbell's majority,	21,986

The total vote for Auditor General is 454,140, which is 118,562 less than the heavy vote for President in 1860. Hartranft's vote is 57,991 less than Lincoln's, and Davis' 60,576 less than McClellan's, the deficiencies in each party being nearly the same.

[For the Globe.]

President Johnson's Idea---Change in the Position of the "Democracy"---Premature Opposition to Negro Suffrage---How it Aids the Extremists.

I have heretofore alluded to the efforts of the Copperhead Democracy to drive the Union party from its support of President Johnson. No candid observer has failed to perceive the persistent exertions they have put forth to effect that extraordinary purpose; yet their failure becomes more apparent every day. As well might they "attempt to dam up the waters of the Nile with bulrushes" as to seek its accomplishment.

They appear to have mistaken, perhaps intentionally, the meaning of the President when he asked: "Have you never known a man who for many years had differed from your views because you were in advance of him, claim them as his own when he came up to your stand point?" or when he said further: "The Democratic party finds its old position untenable, and is coming to ours."

The President's idea is so clear as to require no elucidation, but it is very suggestive and capable of indefinite expansion.

Political parties during the last four years, have had this radical difference, that one has been stationary, clinging to existing social evils with the same tenacity that the aristocracy of Europe cling to the remains of the feudal system that gave them their rank and titles; the other has been powerful and progressive, striking with an unstayed hand at those remnants of barbarism for the existence of which its opponents were contending.

We have seen this conflict end in the destruction of the very foundation of the self-styled "Democratic" faith; the party remained, but its principles were annihilated and it was under the necessity of acknowledging its defeat, or finding a new basis for its future existence. With the desperation of a drowning man, it seized on certain portions of President Johnson's policy, manipulating and construing them with the hope of imposing them on the country as original "Democracy." Besides, in complying with the wholesome regulations of the President, the South itself was assuming an unusual attitude, and of course our Northern "Democrats," as in former times, must continue to follow her example. This I conceive to be as true a picture of the manner in which that party has come to our position as can be given.

If the "Democracy" are actuated by patriotic zeal, why do they desire that the President's own party shall desert him? Why do they wish to precipitate questions of great national importance before the proper time for their the purpose of gaining political capital? But can they not see that in doing this they may become the instruments for disseminating the doctrines they oppose? It will ever be remembered as a feature of the rebellion, that the South in her desire to perpetuate slavery, brought abolitionism to a practical and successful issue. In the same manner the "Democracy" are likely to hasten the progress of radical ideas by taking a stand against them, and thus giving them prominence. There is a general disposition on the part of the Unionists to allow those questions that are likely to produce great political dissensions to remain in quiescence. True, there are extremists beginning already to advocate Negro suffrage, but so far they have not been able to make it of import to the popular mind, and unless the "Democratic" party comes in with its assistance to create a public excitement, it will no doubt continue in abeyance for a long time to come.

Those who favor the extension of the elective franchise to the Negro, know well the magic effect of "Democratic" opposition, and are endeavoring to arouse it to the highest degree in order to secure their purposes.

Commonplace.

Grant's Views.—The New York Herald's Richmond correspondent of the 27th says:—General Grant was heartily welcomed to that city by the military authorities. He fully expressed his opinion there regarding Mexican affairs. He said emphatically that the advent of Maximilian to the pretended throne of Mexico was a part of the rebellion, and that his immediate expulsion should be a part of its history. France did not ask our consent to establish a throne in Mexico, and we should not consult that power in re-establishing the Republic. He said that France had no right to interfere in the question, but if she would involve herself in a war with us on this point, now is the time to have it, while our army and navy is yet organized, and before our commerce is again set afloat on every sea.

Between two Opinions.—The "Democrats" are now in doubt as to whether they should call Andrew Johnson a traitor and a coward, or a friend and a favorite. Instead of coming up to the President's position, as he recently intimated, we fear they will "go back on it." Pity it is that his prospects for the aid of such a powerful order are getting so slim.

☞ The number of orphans in attendance at the different Soldiers' Orphans' Schools in this State on the 1st of last October was 946, and the number ordered to be admitted on the 1st ult., was 1231. A school of this nature we understood was to be started in Cassville, this county. What has become of it?

The Scene of Lee's Surrender.—The Richmond Enquirer says:—"A gentleman just from Appomattox Court House informs us that "there is nothing left of the apple tree under which General Lee surrendered but a red hole in the ground, and it is feared that unless the hole is fenced in, that also will be removed by curiosity-seekers.' It is a subject worthy of notice, too, that the apple tree alluded to was the largest tree in the world, being at least forty times the bulk of the celebrated California oak, which was about the size of the citadel of Ham. About nine hundred and seventeen cords of this apple tree have already been distributed over the United States, in the shape of walking canes, fishing poles, umbrella handles, policemen's clubs, work-boxes, sewing machines, writing desks, vest buttons, corks, charms, lead pencils, pen handles, toddy muddlers, tooth picks, tobacco pipes, and snuff boxes. The number of persons felicitating in these heroic relics is estimated at about twenty eight millions, which is equivalent to the number of Rebels killed, wounded, and missing in the late war, according to the published statements of Northern newspapers, from statistics gathered at the time. In fact, this apple tree enjoy as wide a circulation as any bogus medicine in existence, and, but for the fact that General Lee didn't surrender under any apple tree at all, it might be appropriately placed, photographically, among the historic archives of the country, as the greatest tree in all history.

"It is useless to attempt a conviction of the truth so long as the stock on hand of the great Appomattox apple tree is unexhausted, and, perhaps, even, when that supply gives out—for the destruction of apple trees in New England, when the Maine law excited a prejudice against brandy, renders such an exhaustion probable—history will claim the original as the rightful possessor of the fame of the locality, and the surrender of General Lee under an apple tree will be fixed in the national records and the pictorial reports from the Patent Office on Pomology and Agriculture."

Death of Mr. Van Amburg.—Mr. Van Amburg, the great lion-tamer and successful manager of menageries, and well known in Europe and America, died suddenly last Wednesday morning, at the hotel of Mr. Samuel Miller, on Chestnut street. His death was attributed to congestion of the spleen. Mr. Van Amburg was for many years, a great traveler, and one of the most persevering and energetic men engaged in the hazardous profession of taming wild beasts.

During his eventful life he made many narrow escapes in coming in contact for the first time with wild animals. On one occasion a tiger made a most savage attack upon him, tearing him so badly that a portion of his bowels protruded. He tamed the animal finally and made him a great pet. The probability is that Mr. Van Amburg received more scars than any other individual, while pursuing the duties of the profession, to show to the world the triumph of man over the most ferocious beasts of the forest or the jungle.

Some years ago, while performing ty were in attendance. Eminent literary gentlemen were present, and among them Eugene Sue, the author of "The Wandering Jew." This distinguished writer had a long and interesting interview with the great lion-tamer on the method of subduing wild animals. The information thus received was made the subject of an interesting sketch in the Wandering Jew, although at the time the reader could not have possibly surmised the hero of the story. Mr. Van Amburg appeared on Chestnut street a day or two since, appearently as well as he ever was. He did not complain of sickness until within a short time of his death.—Phila. Press.

☞ We clip the following from on of the Philadelphia daily papers.—Our people visiting or sending down to the city, would do well to make a note of it:

Wanamaker & Brown's Fine Clothing.—This establishment, located at the corner of Sixth and Market street, Philada., familiarly known as "Oak Hall," is probably the largest and best conducted Ready Made Clothing and Merchant Tailoring House, in the State. Their superior syles, excellent workmanship and moderation in prices have made their house deservedly popular.

In their Custom Department, where elegant garments are made to order, none but the very best artists are employed, and the fine assortment of materials to select from enables every one to be well suited.

Samples will be sent by mail, and instructions for measuring, when written for. no8-2m

☞ Farmers and stock raisers are urged to have their stables thoroughly cleansed, and to keep them clean throughout the winter. There is considerable disease already among the cattle in some of the eastern counties, and it is to be feared that the cattle pestilence, now so prevalent in Europe, may break out here unless especial care is taken of our stock.

HARPER'S

NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

Critical notices of the press.

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

The most popular Monthly in the world.—New York Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People; and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each number contains fully 144 pages of reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good wood cuts; and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature.—Trubner's Guide to American Literature, (London.)

The volumes bound constitute of themselves a library of miscellaneous reading such as can not be found in the same compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Publishers have perfected a system of mailing, by which they can supply the Magazine and Weekly promptly to those who prefer to receive their periodicals directly from the office of Publication.

The postage on Harper's Magazine is 24 cents a year, which must be paid at the subscriber's post office.

TERMS:

Harper's Magazine, one year, $4 00

An extra copy of either the Magazine or Weekly will be supplied gratis for every club of Five Subscribers at $4 00 each, in one remittance; or Six copies for $20 00.

Back numbers can be supplied at any time.

A complete set, now comprising Thirty one Volumes, in neat cloth binding, will be sent by express, freight at expense of purchaser, for $2 25 per volume. Single volumes, by mail, postpaid, $3 00. Cloth cases, for binding, 58 cents, by mail, postpaid. Address

INK. INK. INK!

NOTICE

To Merchants and Business Men.

THE undersigned having recently been appointed agent for the New York National Ink Company, hereby gives notice to merchants, business men, and to consumers of all classes that he is prepared to supply the market with an article of Ink which in addition to being the best in use, is emphatically the cheapest ever offered for sale in this country.

It neither corrodes the pen nor moulds; the inkstand, is of a rich bluish tint, flows freely, and is perfectly indelible, giving it advantages not possessed by any other Ink, whether of foreign or domestic manufacture. This Ink contains no sediment and will not, herefore, thicken as most inks do, the last drop being as thin and clear as the first.

☞ All orders whether wholesale or retail, will be promptly filled, at lower rates than as good an article can be purchased in the cities or elsewhere. Persons who entertain doubts as to the superior quality and cheapness of this Ink are respectfully entreated to give it a trial. John H. Clark, sub-agent will canvass the county for the purpose of introducing this Ink.

Brief Items.

—Good news—the price of pork is going down, and was sold under 15 cts; beef goes at the rate of 12½ and 13.

—All persons indebted to Mr. John Brewster, McConnellstown, are politely invited to call and see him on or before the 1st of January. See adv.

—Auction sales are quite numerous on Broad Top, since the lull in the coal trade—the miners leaving for other sections. So we are informed.

—There will be preaching in the Episcopal church of this place, next Sunday, morning and afternoon. Rev. Mr. Barrow will conduct the services.

—On Tuesday night last, some vile scamp entered the Adams' Express office, on railroad street. It is not known how much was pilfered.

—Some thief or thieves stole fifteen bushels of corn from the warehouse of Mr. Geo. Steele, in this place, last week The hogs, evidently, are not all dead yet, but are still to be fattened.

—True, verily—The remark of last week's Monitor that it takes much money to support the Democratic press of Pennsylvania. It talks undoubtedly from a full knowledge of the fact.

—Mr. Beaver, our accomplished soldier Judge, was sworn into office on Friday last. Judge Leas, who has held the position for five years, is the retiring officer, and was a good one.

—Thursday next is Thanksgiving day, as set apart by both the President and Governor. Let all hearts and lips give praise unto the Lord for our many blessings.

—There will be religious services held in the Methodist Church of this place on Thursday morning next at 10½ o'clock. A sermon suitable to the occasion will be delivered. All are invited.

—A brakeman named Graham had his arm broken at the coal siding on Tuesday last. The train was pulling out, and the suddenness of the start threw him off the car through a small bridge, resulting as stated.

—Mr. Carper, teacher of Public School, No. 1, in this borough, has vacated the position. Mr. C. was the only male teacher in the six schools. The Directors are advertising for a competent person to fill the vacancy.

—The celebrated Doctor McEntyre was in town last week, and was compelled to talk a little in public. At the conclusion of his remarks he informed the crowd that the same medicines were for sale at Lewis' Store.

—We agree with the Harrisburg Telegraph in saying that more money order offices should be established, in order to make them popular and remunerative. To have one here, would, we are sure, go one to bring about such a desirable result.

—We are pleased to hear again from correspondents in the county, and we are also pleased to have them say "more anon," "I may come again," and trust that they will make good the impression such announcements have left on our understanding, by giving us information regularly.

—Over forty persons were converted at the religious revival at Saxton. It still continues. The revival in McConnellstown is still in progress. Over thirty have been converted there. Revivals are being held in Broad Top city. These stations are all on the line of the Broad Top Railroad. A revival in the M. E. Church has been commenced here; four seekers last night.

—The public sale of Government clothing, "and other articles too numerous to mention," came off in this place on Friday and Saturday last.—There was a good attendance—the desire being to get a peep at or purchase some of the relics of the war of 1861-5. A sale of similar articles although on a larger scale, is to take place here on Saturday, the 16th inst.

—A certain individual or individuals must have gone to a great deal of trouble last Thursday night, when they posted some written placards concerning the market and market master, in the Diamond. We hear there was some poetry written about it, which we would like to see. The affair was evidently intended as a burlesque on the market, but it so turned out that the market was something of a reality—the Diamond being almost crowded by country people most of the day.

—The County Superintendent thus sums up the labors of his office, since the commencement of the public examinations for teachers: "Twenty-five public examinations have been held, since which some twenty five applicants have received private examinations; thirty-seven schools have been visited, averaging one and a half hours to each visit, and some 800 miles travelled. In addition to this, an average of some three or four official letters have been written daily, and numerous cases of difficulty attended to orally."

The Benefits of Advertising.

In answer to a correspondent, the New York Tribune states that it is true, as reported, that a druggist who has now a speciality before the public is paying that establishment $10,000 a year for advertising. It says he paid $1,500 for the insertion of one mammoth advertisement, and adds on the general subject: "Bonner once paid us $3,000 for one insertion of an advertisement of the Ledger. He knew that through judicious advertising he could insure a fortune." Surely there is not a better blessing to the community at large than a good, live, readable and reliable newspaper; but yet how few appreciate it as they should. The local press should be sustained, and to sustain it requires more than the mere pleasure of subscribing for and reading it. You should advertise in it, and get everybody else to advertise in it. If you want anything, make known your wants through the papers; if you have anything to sell, be it house, land, goods, or cattle, let the people know it by advertising in the papers. Do you want anybody or everybody to "take particular notice," hand in your notice to the printer. And don't, above all things, be afraid of spending "too much" in advertising, for you can't do it—what you spend in advertising will return to you in two-fold, three fold, four fold quantities! Think of Bonner giving $3,000 for one insertion of one advertisement, and how rich he is; and then think of paying only as many dollars as he paid thousands, and then ask yourself the question, "Oughtn't I to advertise, and get rich, too?"

☞ Paper has risen almost one hundred per cent. since the first of August, and is now quite as high as it was any time last year, and the tendency is still onward and upward.—There is little prospect of relief before spring. Paper, ink, labor, and all the materials which go to make a newspaper, are so high that no proprietor can afford to publish a paper for less than double the price before the war. Still, people complain because the prices are not reduced, never thinking that the matter is entirely beyond the control of the publishers. In this connection we would ask the candid reader to compare the Globe with any country paper in the State, either in regard to size, price, or quantity of choice and useful reading matter, and we are willing to submit to his judgment in the premises. Another important fact we wish to call his attention to, namely: that we have refused medical advertisements, with glaring cuts, to a large amount of money, particularly those of an indelicate character, and we have the cheering evidence of a constantly increasing subscription list, showing that the moral and intelligent community prefer such a paper for the family circle to the majority of the papers at large, filled with such offensive advertisements.

Thank you, Gentlemen.

We must return thanks to our gentlemanly correspondents, who have seen proper to accommodate the public with items of local interest from their respective neighborhoods. It encourages us to know that our appeal for news was not unheeded, and also that the worth of the Globe is duly appreciated. We can assure you, gentlemen, that your articles will be read by a grateful public, who will look as eagerly as we will, to hear from you repeatedly. Our desire is to make the Globe a good local paper, so that not only our county subscribers, but those at a distance may know all the particulars of news transpiring about home. It should not be expected that we, of ourselves, are able to gather all the items from every part of the county; but our efforts should be assisted by our good friends in every locality. We expect, next, to return our thanks to the ladies, who are also qualified and expected to assist in "keeping the people posted." Let us hear from everybody.

Prices Changing.

We are happy to record the gratifying fact that the price of beef and pork is on the decline. The latter commodity is somewhat plenty, the farmers who raised hogs having no other idea that the price of pork this fall would be in the 20's. Corn is plenty, and they could afford to fatten them well, but their ideas of "fat" prices must have vanished when they come to sell them to find that the market is stocked, and that no more than 15 cts per pound will be given. These figures do not indicate the average, either, but are the highest.

In beef the decline in price is also encouraging. From 18 and over is deducted as much as to make it 15 cts and under, and housekeepers are rejoicing in the consciousness that the era of civilization is again dawning.

Farmers and Others, Attention!

We are requested to call a meeting at the Court House on Saturday, Dec. 16, at 1 o'clock. p. m., of farmers and all other persons interested, for the purpose of organizing an association for the arrest and conviction of horse thieves, and the recovery of stolen animals. There are regularly organized associations of the kind in most of the counties of the State, and it will be to the interest of all who keep horses, in this county, to organize a similar association. We hope there will be a good attendance.

☞ Daniel Kiper offers a reward for a horse stolen from him. See adv.

Musical Instruments.

There is a feeling generally among persons about to purchase musical instruments, that were they in Philadelphia or New York, they could select from a number of instruments a better Piano or Cabinet Organ, than they can buy from an agent. Mason & Hamlin, in order to meet this feeling, have established a number of larger agencies, where they keep a large number of organs of the various styles, so that persons can have the same advantages in buying that they could in the cities or at the Manufactory.—The undersigned has one of these larger agencies, and keeps constantly on hand a variety of the various styles of Cabinet Organs, from which persons wishing can make as good a selection as were they in Philadelphia or Pittsburgh, thereby saving the freight from either of those places, as his prices are precisely the same as in Philadelphia or Pittsburgh, or the Manufactory, Boston.

A player is at the store room constantly, who will perform on the instruments, and exhibit their various powers and qualities, show the different stops and their combinations, and explain their internal constructions.

I also keep on hand a fine selection of Pianos from the celebrated manufactories of Steinway & Sons, New York, and Gaehle & Co's., Baltimore, which I sell at Factory prices.

Persons ordering an Organ or Piano by letter are assured that as good an instrument will be sent as if they were here to select it personally, the subscriber considering himself bound by honor and interest to select and forward none other than the very best of the style ordered. The subscriber is anxious to put into the hand of every one, whether they intend purchasing an instrument or not, a copy of the Cabinet Organ Circular, which contains a vast amount of interesting musical information, and will send free, post-paid, a copy to any one desiring it.

B. M. GREENE,

Sole Agent for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organ, for Central Penna.

The Schools.

R. M McDivitt, County Superintendent, in a recent article makes the following statement with regard to our schools. We concur with him in the belief that the salaries of teachers should be increased, believing that in these times of high prices, the labors of the teacher should be rewarded with even more liberality than are persons engaged in other branches of industry. It would be well for every board of directors to heed this gentle warning in time, ere the event should arrive in which a teacher cannot be had for "love or money," and children will be left without a common school education. Teachers are becoming scarce, since such favorable openings are presented in other pursuits, and directors must secure competent teachers now, by giving good wages. The superintendent says:

The regularly advertised list of public examinations for this county closed on the 30th of September last, during which some 180 applicants presented themselves for examination; a number insufficient to supply all the schools. In order to meet the demand for teachers, there have been granted a larger number of private examinations, perhaps, than that of any other year, and still the requisite number will with difficulty be obtained, a number of schools being yet unopened for want of teachers, while in some districts the schools have, for some reason, been delayed for weeks beyond their usual time of opening. In no department of business is there so great a demand for laborers, as there is at present for efficient and well qualified teachers, for although many have returned from the war and resumed their labors in the school room, yet there are so many ways of doing better, that, notwithstanding the directors, in most of the districts, have increased the wages, there are not enough making application to fill the schools. The present salaries of teachers are obviously insufficient to meet the increased expense of living, and hence many of our most prominent male and female teachers are abandoning the profession to engage in some other pursuit in which industry and talent are better rewarded, while others are only awaiting an opportunity to effect a similar change. It is a conceded fact that other branches of labor, requiring in many cases little talent and less mental anxiety, are far better remunerated, and it is obvious that a fair increase of salary is imperative in order to retain in our schools, teachers of experience and ability.

A Truth Confirmed.

Dr. Rothrock, in his report, gives the following item with reference to one of the sub-districts which he examined. As an item of interest, it is well worth perusing, and for the knowledge it reveals with reference to the intermarriage of relatives, it is well worth remembering. We are at a loss to know where the sub district referred to is located.

"In one sub-district, of all the men drafted and examined, I found scarcely a good sound man. Upon inquiry, I learned that in the early settlement of this country two families of Scotch Irish birth located there, who were intelligent, healthy, thorough, going people, possessing strong vitality and great endurance. Their children commenced marrying and intermarrying, until now in the fourth and fifth generation, there is not really a sound adult known in all that extensive connection; proving, so far as it goes, the evil of the intermarriage of relatives."

☞ We are sorry that our letter from Marklesburg was crowded out this issue. It will appear next week; in the meantime write again.

Things about Eagle Foundry.

Seeing in perusing your excellent paper, the Globe, your kind invitation for communications from the country, we propose to let your numerous readers know something of "our beloved valley," Trough Creek, which is one of the most moral places in the county. Our barns are crowded with emblements, and as a general thing they are never otherwise. Business has not been so brisk for some time at the Foundry, owing to the extensive Foundry building being burned sometime since, but the gentlemanly Proprietor, John W. Scott, has been to an immense expense in re-building the same, and in all probability we will soon hear the well known whistle, or as a soldier would call it, "the same old thing." We hope Mr. Scott may fully realize his trouble, in profit, as he is a regular business man and able to carry on business to suit all customers who may give him a call. The schools in our township have commenced and are progressing finely under the able Teachers we have selected. On Saturday, Nov. 25th, '65, they held an Institute, (the first for this term,) at Chestnut Grove, and had quite a gay time; as the weather was beautiful there was a staving attendance of teachers and citizens. Upon motion the house was called to order, and a regular organization was formed, of which Mr. J B. Fisher was elected President, and J. Ealor Applebaugh, Secretary. Several subjects were taken up, which were discussed freely and unassumingly, as well as ably and fluently. Those present were highly pleased with the manner in which the "machine" was run. The afternoon session was of short duration, and upon motion by Mr. R. Crum a committee was formed or appointed to select subjects for the next days exercise which were as follows: Orthography and Grammar, for fore noon's exercise; and Geography and Reading for the afternoon exercise. Teachers were elected for the different subjects as follows: Orthography; Mr. R. H. Crum; Grammar, Mr. E. French; Geography, Mr. J. B. Fisher; and Reading, J. Ealor Applebaugh. The general suggestion was, 'twas better to have a variety of subjects, as it would certainly make it more interesting.

Tod township is, speaking emphatically, flourishing rapidly; there are nine schools in the township, and not one female teacher employed. Tod don't pretend to disparage female teachers, but considers 'tis too bad for females to expose themselves to inclement weather during the season of winter. Such was the general consideration of male teachers present at the Institute in Tod township. The exercises exceeded the time which was allowed or granted, and on motion the session adjourned to meet in three weeks More anon,

Nov. 30, '65. ROLAE.

Items from Broad Top.

Rev. Gessford, (Baptist) has been holding a protracted meeting in this place for some two weeks with great success; quite a number have embraced religion, and there are still some ten or twelve yet seeking. And from present appearance we have all reason to believe that Broad Top City is going to become famous on account of her piety.

And as we speak of the above as being a success, we would also say that Revs. Clark and Creveling, (Methodist,) are also holding protracted meetings at Saxton, and also at the White church, the latter being some three miles from Broad Top City, and are meeting with great success. We are happy to know that the Lord is graciously reviving religion among the Coal regions; we trust that it will still continue.

We would caution people to be careful of fire. A few days since a house near Broad Top City, in what is called the row, caught fire from the chimney, or rather the flue, and it was only by the assistance of a great number of the people, (men and women,) that said fire was checked. Had it not been checked, some eight or ten houses would have been destroyed, being in a row. ***

Broad Top City, Dec. 2.

☞ At a certain point on the Ebensburg and Cresson Railroad two fountains appear, (one on each side of the road,) from which the water flows in opposite directions, and reaches tide water at a distance of some three thousand miles apart. The fountains are within fifty yards of each other.—From the fountain on the north side of the road the water finds its way into the Ebensburg branch of the Conemaugh, whence it flows through the Kiskeminetas, Allegheny, Ohio, and Mississippi rivers into the Gulf of Mexico; that on the south side through Chest creek and the Susquehanna river into the Chesapeake bay.

Christmas is Coming.

If you wish to delight your friend with a Christmas or New Year's Gift, send him a copy of the "Photograph Family Record." There is no better way. A. S Harrison is agent for this county.

Prune Grape Vines Now.

An exchange says the books generally advise winter pruning, or during the month of February. The objections to that season are, the work is liable to run into March, which does not allow time for the cut to become dry enough to check the flow of sap a little later; the weather is apt to be cold, rendering it uncomfortable; besides, the wood is frozen much of the time, in which state it ought not to be disturbed. Their is sufficient leisure now, the vines are pliable and can be handled at will, while the mild weather will dry and harden the cuts so that there will be no danger of bleeding in the spring. A pair of pruning shears will be found very convenient in making the cuts—in fact, they are almost indispensable to the horticulturist in trimming his shrubbery, roses, honeysuckles, blackberries, &c., in addition to the grape vines.

PROF. J. H. M'ENTYRE'S GREAT REMEDY,

THE

INDIAN COMPOUND

Internal and External Medicine,

WILL CURE:

☞ Diarrhœa, Bloody Flux in one day,
☞ Headache and Earache in three minutes.
☞ Toothache in one minute.
☞ Neuralgia in five minutes,
☞ Sprains in twenty minutes,
☞ Sore Throat in ten minutes,
☞ Cholic and Cramp in five minutes,
☞ Rheumatism in one day,
☞ Pain in the Back or Side in ten minutes,
☞ Bad Coughs or Colds in one day,
☞ Fever and Ague in one day.
☞ Cures Deafness, Asthma, Piles,
☞ Bronchitis Affections, Dyspepsia,
☞ Inflammation of the Kidneys, Erysipelas,
☞ Liver Complaint and Palpitation of the Heart.

Keep it in your Families—Sickness comes when least expected.

I propose to check, and effectually dissipate more ache and pain, and to accomplish more perfect equilibrium of all the circulating fluids in the human system, than can be effected by any other, or all other methods of medical aid in the same space of time.

THIS POPULAR REMEDY is fast coming into use, for the fact that I cure, free of charge, all these complaints whenever there is an opportunity to do so. As soon as it is applied it almost miraculously kills the pain. I do not ask you to buy before you are certain of its efficiency. If you have an ache or pain, it is warranted to do all it purports on the label; otherwise the money will be refunded.

I do not propose to cure every disease—only a class named by my directions. My liniment operates on chemical and electric principles, and is, therefore, appliable, to the cure or natural restorative of all organic derangement arising from an improper circulation of the nerve vital fluids.

Prof. J. H. McEntyre's INDIAN COMPOUND acts directly on the absorbents, reducing glandular and other swellings in incredible short time, without any possible danger from its use under any possible circumstances.

This is an internal and external medicine—composed of roots, herbs and barks, such as our forefathers used.—There is a bountiful supply on earth to cure all complaints if we only knew what they were.

This has been a great study with the Medical Faculty for many years, to find out the kinds best adapted to the above complaints—how to put them together, and what proportions to use. J. H. McENTYRE,
Proprietor, Reading, Pa.

THE RUINS OF THE LATE ALEXANDRIA FOUNDRY.

THE undersigned not feeling to rebuild the Foundry, now offers for sale the ruins and all property saved. The building was a stone structure.—The Moulding room was 41 x 46; Ware room, Engine and Lathe rooms were 39 x 47; the walls of which are still standing and were but little injured by the fire. The engine, boiler and stack are perfect, the cupalo is also standing uninjured. There is a large stock of valuable patterns, consisting of rolling mill, grist mill, forge and furnace patterns; a large stock of flasks for all kinds of work, a full set of large and small crain and hand ladles, the largest of which is capable of holding twenty hundred.

The ground connected with the Foundry is one acre and fifteen perches on which there is erected a frame building used as a pattern house; also, wagon and carriage houses.

ALSO,

Three houses and lots, having fruit, &c., all of which will be sold cheap. Terms easy to suit the purchaser.

Farm For Sale.

THE HEIRS of Joseph Reed will sell, at private sale a valuable limestone farm containing and allowances, situate in WEST TOWNSHIP, Huntingdon county, Pa., one mile fro Petersburg, which is on the line of the Penna. Railroad.

157 Acres, 141 Perches,

About 120 acres are cleared and in good state of cultivation, including some 25 acres in meadow. The remaining part is well timbered and is every acre available for farming purpo es

There are on it a large well finished brick house, a large bank barn, one tenant house, a brick spring house, carriage house, wagon shed and corn crib.—Also, an excellent apple and peach orchard. The fences are good, including nearly 200 panels post and rail fence.

On the farm are three never failing springs of the best limestone water, and a running stream passing through one corner of the barnyard. This presents a rare chance to obtain a productive, first quality farm.

For further particulars call upon, or address, previous to October 20th, the undersigned.

FRUIT TREES,
ORNAMENTAL TREES,
SHADE TREES,
GRAPE VINES,
PLANTS, &C.,

At the nurseries of Taylor & Cremer

Who offer their stock of well grown and thrifty TREES, VINES, PLANTS, &c., at their old prices. The expense of grafting and planting this stock having been incurred before the outbreak of the rebellion when the price of labor was low, they can afford to sell these Trees at 50 per cent. less than they can sell the same kind of trees next year. While other Nurserymen have raised their prices about 50 per cent., these still sell at the old rates this year; that is to say—Apple Trees, $15, $18, and $20 per hundred, according to size, &c. Standard Pear 50 to 75 cents each. Dwarf Pear, 50 to 75 cents each, and $30 to $45 per hundred. Plum and Apricot, at 40 to 50 cents each. Also, Peach, Cherry, Quince and other trees; Grape Vines, Lawton Blackberry, Raspberry, and Strawberry plants, Dahlia roots, and Shade and Ornamental Trees—all at the old rates.

Money invested in fruit trees is sure to yield a good return. Now is your time to order trees.

Designed exclusively to impart a thorough and

PRACTICAL BUSINESS EDUCATION.

All classes of persons require such an education. Those possessing means, need it in conducting their own business Those without means need it in obtaining and creditably filling lucrative positions in the employ of others.

The course of instruction and practice is arranged so as to fully meet the diversified wants of every department of

as comprehended or embraced under the three general divisions of industry: Agriculture, Manufacture and Commerce.

Each student is instructed individually in both theory and practice of Book Keeping, according to the most approved and labor saving methods. Business Penmanship, Calculations, and all the collateral branches of a complete course of business education; and upon passing a satisfactory examination is awarded, by authority of law, a diploma, under the corporate seal of the college.

Students are received at any time. And it is believed that a practical experience of over TWENTY YEARS will be considered by the public an ample guarantee of the practical character of the course and efficiency of the instruction.

All further information desired can be obtained at the college, or by addressing the Principal for a circular by mail.

☞ A liberal discount is allowed to wounded and honorably discharged soldiers. The college is open day and Jevening.

Electricity.

DR. BREWSTER HAS OPENED an office in Huntingdon, Pa., and has cured, and further pledges himself to cure a class of diseases acknowledged to be incurable by any known process of medication, diseases that never have, nor never can be controlled, only by his mode of applying the various modifications of Electricity.

The Doctor does not wish to convey the impression that he cures all diseases in all conditions; he does not wish to shock the sense of the public by asserting that he can cure pulmonary consumption after the lungs are half decayed, but he pledges himself to cure every case of pulmonary consumption in the early and middle stage, and every other disease where a sufficient amount of vitality remains for reaction.

Electricity is always safe in the hands of an experienced operator. The currents are perfectly under control, and can be regulated to suit the delicate nerves of a child without any unpleasant sensation.

☞ All those who have long suffered from painful and obstinate diseases!

☞ All those who have been given up by other Physicians!

☞ All those who have been dismissed as incurable from hospitals!

ARE INVITED TO CALL.

Electricity, unlike Medicine, is capable of producing all the changes necessary to cure any disease, when applied from proper polarities. The following are among the diseases our system of practice has proved especially successful in curing.

Diseases Cured by Electropathy.

Amaurosis; Aphony, loss of voice, &c.; Asthma; Ague Chills, fever and ague; Atrophy; nervous consumption; Atony of the stomach, Amenorrhœa, suppressed menses; All mercurial diseases; Bites of poisonous insects or animals; Bronchitis; stone or gravel in Bladder; Consumption; Chlorosis, green sickness; Concussion of brain; Contraction of chest; stricture of limbs, Cholic, from different causes; Cramps or spasms, chronic or acute; Congestive diseases of all kinds, Corea; St. Vitus dance; Coldness of feet and hands; Cancers, in certain stages; Copper colored cuticle, or blotches; Catarrh; Diptheria; Deformed limbs straitened, Deafness, from paralysis of accoustic nerve; Dizziness or drowsiness; Dropsy; Diabetes; Dyspepsia, in all its forms; Dismenorrhœa; painful menstruation; Difficult respiration; Enlargement of joints; Earache; Epilepsy, falling sickness; Fits, from different causes; Gastrition, irritation of the stomach; Gout; Goitre or swelled neck; Glandular swellings; Hemiplegia; Hemorrhage, from different causes; Hysteria, irritable spine, &c.; sick or nervous Headache; Insanity; Inflamed or sore eyes; Incontinence of urine; torpid state of Liver; Lungs, hemorrhage of, congestion of, &c.; Lockjaw; Liver, enlargement of; Leuchorrhea; flour albus; whites; Mental depression; Muscular contraction; Menstruation, derangement in; Monomania; Milkleg; Numbness, from injuries or otherwise; Neuralgia; Nocturnal emissions; Old sores, indolent ulcers; Ozena, in some of its forms; Paraplegia; Palsy, numb or shaking, Paralysis, in whatever part; Poisoning; Palpitation of the heart; Prostration from various causes; Prolapsus uteri, &c., Prolapsus ani, or piles; excessive Perspiration; suspended Perspiration; Pulmonary apoplexy; Rush of Blood to the head; Rheumatism, acute or chronic; Restlessness; Swelled Tonsils; Sore Throat, from any cause; Salt rheum; Scrofula; Spinal diseases, curvature, &c.; Ovarian Tumors; &c.; Tremens, delirium, or at death, Tetanus, or lockjaw, Uterine misplacements, Uterine weakness; Weak Eyes, &c.; White swellings.

JOHN REED, Agent, Huntingdon, Pa.

STAR MAGIC LINIMENT.

$1000 REWARD will be paid for any medicine that excels this for the following diseases:

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Spinal Affections, Contracted Joints, Cholic Pains, Pains in Side or Back, Toothache, Headache, Sprains, Sore Throat, Cuts, Bruises, Burns, and all Diseases of the Muscles, Skin and Glands.

This is an Internal and External Medicine, composed of Roots, Herbs and Barks such as our forefathers used.— There is a bountiful supply on the earth to cure all complaints, if we only knew what they were. This has been a subject for constant study with the Medical Faculty for a great many years, to find out the kinds best adapted to the above complaints—how to put them together, and what portions to use.

This wonderful remedy needs no recommendation save the results which invariably follow its application.

☞ This popular remedy is fast coming into use from the fact that it gives good satisfaction.

☞ PHYSICIANS are invited to test its efficacy in all cases of Rheumatism, Affections of the Spinal Column, and all Diseases of the Skin, Muscles and Glands. It has been used in thousands of instances under the personal supervision of the Inventors, and has never disappointed their expectations. All we ask for it is a trial—experimental proof—not the testimony of the men of straw, are the vouchers we desire to present to the public.

It would be well for many now lying in beds of torture, if these facts could reach their sick chambers. It is more important to them than to the inventors that this should be the case. "Truth is mighty and must prevail."

☞ Keep it in your family, for sickness comes when you least expect it.
